Cumberland County Positive Youth Development Coalition (CCPYDC)

The Cumberland County Positive Youth Development Coalition (CCPYDC) is a county-wide juvenile delinquency prevention effort funded by the New Jersey Attorney General's Office and Cumberland County Freeholders. Started in the city of Vineland in 2009, the Coalition expanded to Bridgeton and Millville in 2013. The Coalition brings together stakeholders from a number of sectors including education, law enforcement, social services, faith-based institutions, and youth-serving organizations in order to reduce juvenile delinquency and prevent those already involved in the juvenile system from becoming involved in the adult criminal justice system. Members utilize their knowledge and experience with juvenile delinquency prevention methods, as well as their connections to community resources, in order to collaborate on initiatives centered on policy and practice change, resource development, enhancement of the youth service delivery system, and community events to promote positive youth development.
